Anna Haines, Professor and Director of the Center for Land Use Education, UW-Stevens Point

Anna Haines is a professor in the College of Natural Resources at the University of Wisconsin Stevens Point, a land use and community development specialist with the University of Wisconsin Extension, and Director of the Center for Land Use Education. Haines received her Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin Madison in the Department of Urban and Regional Planning. Her research and teaching focus on planning and community development from a natural resources or environmental perspective. Her research has focused on factors that influenced land division in amenity-rich areas of Wisconsin, understanding how zoning codes affect future build-out scenarios, sustainable zoning, and local food clusters. Her Extension work has focused on comprehensive planning and planning implementation tools and techniques, sustainable communities, and property rights issues.
