JAY MATSON

Federal Energy Regulatory Commission

Jay Matson is a branch chief in the Office of Enforcement, Division of Investigations, at the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, managing a team of approximately ten individuals that investigate alleged instances of non-compliance with FERC-related laws, regulations, and tariffs. Previously, he served as the lead OE-DOI attorney in similar investigations. Prior to joining FERC, as an attorney at various firms, he represented investor-owned utilities, project developers, public power entities, state commissions, regional organizations, and others on a broad array of issues arising throughout the United States related to the regulation of electric utilities, natural gas pipelines, and hydroelectric projects, as well as the development of wind and nuclear projects.
