MARIA REDMOND

Public Service Commission of Wisconsin

Maria Redmond has worked for the State of Wisconsin for 18 years and currently serves as the director of the Wisconsin Office of Energy Innovation (OEI) at the Public Service Commission of Wisconsin. In this capacity, she is responsible for management of the OEI, one of 56 federally-designated state energy offices in the states and territories located in the United States. She works with her teams to direct federally-funded grant and loan programs, as well as the statewide energy efficiency and renewable energy program, Focus on Energy. She ensures accountability for planning, administration, and oversight of statewide energy programs and regulatory policies, assuring alignment with the values, mission, and vision of the office. Maria has knowledge of renewable energy, alternative fuels, biofuels, and advanced vehicle technologies as well as significant experience in developing and implementing competitive energy programs and services on behalf of the state agencies and businesses.
