JAMES A. ZELLMER

Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources

Jim Zellmer, a deputy division administrator with the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources, oversees several programs within the DNR's environmental management division: drinking water and groundwater, office of great waters, and water quality. He has over 30 years of experience working in both the central office of the WDNR and the Green Bay field office. Before assuming his current role in May 2016, Jim served in a temporary assignment as deputy director of the waste and materials management program. He worked for 20 years in the Green Bay office as a plan review engineer, a field supervisor and an integrator. Prior to that, Jim worked in the central office in the drinking water and groundwater program. Jim's education includes a BS in water resources from the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point and a Master's in civil and environmental engineering from the University of Wisconsin-Madison.
