GREG BOLLAM

Madison Gas and Electric

Greg is assistant vice president and regulatory consultant with Madison Gas and Electric Company. Greg has been with MGE for over 35 years. In his current role, Greg provides expert insight and research into ongoing regulatory and rate issues across the country. Greg's past responsibilities have included generation planning, transmission policy, electric and natural gas sales and revenue forecasting, and electric and natural gas pricing.

Additionally, Greg works with the Edison Electric Institute (EEI) in several capacities. He is part of the Smarter Energy Infrastructure advisory team; co-chair of the Customer Solutions executive advisory committee; a member of the Economic Policy advisory group; and a member of the Rates and Regulatory Affairs committee. Greg also serves on the Critical Consumer Issues Forum (CCIF) advisory committee -- CCIF is a collaboration of state utility commissioners, consumer advocates, and electric utilities which addresses important consumer issues at the forefront of the energy policy debate. He is also a member of the Wisconsin Public Utility Institute's (WPUI) board of directors and the Center for Public Utilities' (CPU) advisory council.

Outside of work, Greg is a long-time volunteer in the Destination Imagination (creative problem solving) program. He has a B.A. in economics from St. Norbert College and a M.S. in economics from the University of Wisconsin-Madison.
