

LISA AGRIMONTI
Fredrikson & Byron, P.A.

Lisa Agrimonti is a regulatory attorney who represents utilities, independent power producers, and transmission companies throughout the Midwest. She works collaboratively with clients to obtain necessary permits for large infrastructure projects and to resolve disputes relating to local land use issues, tariffs, and property rights. Lisa represents utilities and independent power producers seeking approvals from local government entities, state commissions, and federal agencies to construct new facilities. She has acted as lead regulatory counsel for high voltage transmission projects, including five multi-value projects, located in Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa, and Wisconsin and obtained approvals for more than 1,000 miles of new 345 kV interstate electric lines. Lisa has assisted multiple independent power producers in obtaining local and state permits for more than 1,000 megawatts of wind generation in South Dakota, Iowa, and Minnesota, a utility scale solar farm in Michigan. She has transmission line NEPA experience with the Rural Utilities Service (USDA) and the United States Fish and Wildlife Service and has obtained state public utility status in Wisconsin for a new market entrant. She also supports utilities in meeting their compliance obligations before state commissions and local government units. In addition, she regularly advises on vegetation management requirements, utility relocation, and easement disputes. Lisa concentrates a portion of her practice on real estate litigation, condemnation and local land use matters. Lisa's primary interest is water, diving under it and playing hockey on top of it. Prior to attending law school, Lisa was a newspaper reporter in California and Kansas. Lisa received a B.A. from Santa Clara University (California), a M.S.J. from Northwestern University, an M.B.A. from Wichita State University, a J.D. from Washburn University School of Law (Kansas), and a D.B.A. from Metropolitan State University (Minnesota). She has been admitted to the bar in Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Wisconsin and to the U.S. Supreme Court.