

MICHAEL MUCHA

Madison Metropolitan Sewerage District

Michael Mucha is the chief engineer and director of the Madison Metropolitan Sewerage District which he joined in 2011. He has dedicated his 28-year career in local government to building public trust through sustainability. Michael is chair of the US Water Alliance's One Water Council. He also teaches courses in sustainable infrastructure management and adaptive leadership at the University of Wisconsin and at Edgewood College. Michael is a professional engineer and Envision Sustainability Professional, with a B.S. in civil engineering from the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee and a Master's in public administration from the University of Washington-Seattle. He serves on local and national boards and committees, including the Institute for Sustainable Infrastructure, the US Water Alliance, and the National Association of Clean Water Agencies.