RENEW Wisconsin

As executive director of RENEW Wisconsin, Ismaeel Chartier leads across the full spectrum of RENEW's mission, where clean energy deployment, public policy, fundraising, and stakeholder engagement come together to shape Wisconsin's clean energy future. He sees his role as unifying the organization's external-facing work, advancing renewable energy programs, securing sustainable funding, cultivating strategic partnerships, and ensuring real-world implementation, all of which directly inform RENEW's advocacy and regulatory strategy. Ismaeel oversees cross-functional teams working on solar and electrification initiatives, corporate and philanthropic giving, Tribal and local partnerships, and public-engagement campaigns. With 20+ years' experience in nonprofit leadership, systems design, and strategic development, Ismaeel specializes in moving people from passive awareness to active investment which includes everything from crafting grants and ESG-aligned sponsorships to building community programs and translating energy policy into something anyone can understand. Whether leading a RENEW Clean Energy Summit, helping a contractor navigate net-metering, or strengthening RENEW's operational backbone, Ismaeel strives for alignment between vision and execution and believes that innovation doesn't mean more complexity - it means disciplined coordination, measurable results, and smarter use of resources in service to people and place.
